2024 Oakland mayoral recall election

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The 2024 Oakland mayoral recall election was a successful special recall election to remove Oakland mayor Sheng Thao from office less than two years into her first four-year term. It was held on November 5, 2024 concurrent with the statewide and nationwide general elections.

Background [edit]

Sheng Thao was elected mayor in 2022 with a margin of 0.6% after instant-runoff voting. Her administration attracted criticism for firing its Chief of Police in early 2023 following a report that the Chief mishandled internal investigations,[1] failing to submit an application for a $2 million retail theft prevention grant,[2] and blamed for Oakland's relatively high crime rate.[3] Thao's home was raided by the FBI in June 2024, reportedly as part of a corruption investigation into kickbacks to California Waste Solutions, a waste and recycling contractor, in return for 2022 campaign contributions.[4][5]

In June 2024, the recall obtained enough signatures to be placed on the ballot alongside the recall of Alameda District Attorney Pamela Price.[6]

Former mayor Libby Schaaf[7] and former Oakland councilmember Loren Taylor[8] supported the recall, while U.S. Congresswoman Barbara Lee[9] and former mayor Jean Quan[10] opposed it. Piedmont resident and hedge fund manager Philip Dreyfuss contributed $605,000 to the recall campaign, and $200,000 to Price's recall.[11]
